[An experimental study on the relationship of transforming growth factor beta, collagen and bone repair]. To investigate the relationship of transforming growth factor beta (TGF-beta), collagen and bone repair. TGF-beta was injected into the proximal tibia of mice and changes of TGF-beta and collagen contents, the numbers of osteoblasts, osteoclasts and chondrocytes were evaluated histologically. The TGF-beta stimulated the decrease of the number of osteoclasts and the increase of the number of osteoblasts. The TGF-beta increased the total area and content of collagen in the bone tissues. The TGF-beta can stimulate the decrease of the number of osteoclasts and the increase of the number of osteoblasts. It can increase the total area and content of collagen in the bone tissues. Thursday, December 12, 2012 I know! I know! It has been far too long since I posted. Life just seems to be getting busier and busier. I now have 5 little ones in my house and don't have a moment to myself sometimes. I really feel like I have a ton of blogging to do but between the kids & hubby's work schedule it just hasn't worked out. Now on to today's layouts. I was originally going to share this layout with my friend Stefi. She just happens to be doing a layout swap with me. Unfortunately we are going in a bit different directions for the photos (Me: black & white theme and Stefi: Colorful). For today's page however we decided to go with this theme. When I decided to do a page for December's theme it really came together for me so I did have to make some changes. I decided to let the fabric define the layout a bit more by going with more of a border. I also added a few chipboards I had laying around. I don't have any stamping or embellishments for this layout. I will have to get back to that. I wanted to make a nice layout and add some texture, so in an effort to not have another plain page I added these little embellishments. I feel like they added a touch of fun and whimsy to the layout. I really like how this page turned out. Welcome to the December theme. Be sure to come back for details and for a chance to win some goodies. ☺☺☺☺☺

Field of the Invention This invention relates to a spray oil collecting unit for spraying mist of petroleum oils. 2. Description of the Prior Art In order to clarify the working environment, the mist of petroleum oils, e.g., light lubricants and power transmission oils have been collected in the past. As a dust collecting device for this purpose, a dust collecting device comprising a gas inlet pipe and a dust separating section connected to the gas inlet pipe in a substantially inverted L-shape is popularized. And, since the amount of the collected dust is substantially varied by the condition of a flow of the gas, a closed system (a system controlled to cause the maximum flow) is widely used. In this case, a flat flow of gas is often used to collect the dust. However, since this system has the gas inlet pipe placed above the dust separating section as a central pipe, the height of the housing of the spray oil collecting unit is generally high. Furthermore, since the flow of gas is adjusted by filling the fine holes with oil mist, i.e., oil particles in the form of fine particles
